

Abstract Of The Disclosure

A method and a device for controlling an internal combustion engine, having a control element for controlling the fuel injection. The fuel injection is divided into at least a first partial injection and a second partial injection. A start of triggering of the second partial injection takes place a specifiable first time span after an end of triggering of the first partial injection.

5

370643

370643